Education Board Has Busy Session

Picks Three Men For Janitors From Civil Service List to Replace Men Who Now Hold Jobs But Did Not Pass Examination—Other Routine Business.

The board of education held a busy session Friday evening at the high school with Trustees Beeres, Brinnier, Fowler, Hayes, Katz, Van Etten and President Flemming present. When the board adjourned it adjourned to meet on September 10, the president and clerk being authorized to draw warrants for the August payroll after the finance committee has audited the roll.

A communication was received from the Alumni Association seeking permission to use the high school gymnasium for a dance on the evening of September 10, from 8 until 12 o'clock. Granted on motion of Trustee Fowler.

Heating Company Makes Offer.

Pratt Engineering Company of Kingston offered by letter to install in one of the city schools equipment which would permit the using of smaller sizes of coal at a considerable saving. The smallest sizes may be burned by using a blower equipment. The company offered to install an automatic equipment in one of the schools and operate it for 30 days. If at that time it proved satisfactory the board could purchase it, making payment as the board deemed best. The company even offered to receive payments in the amount of the annual savings which the equipment made possible. If the equipment was not satisfactory the company agreed to remove it and place the boiler in the same condition as prior. By using a blower the rice and barley sizes of coal may be used. The system is the same as used in the city hall, where the engineering company stated $1,450 had been saved a year by burning smaller sizes of coal. The matter was referred to the building committee to investigate and report on.

The report of the building committee on installation of pyramid grates in the boilers of certain schools was to the effect that buckwheat coal could be used and by using a blower rice and barley sizes could be used. This matter was referred to the committee at a prior meeting. The committee reported that a communication had been received from Edgar N. Palen stating that the cost of the grates in School No. 2 would be $255, there is now a blower at that school. At No. 6 the cost would be $466, with a blower equipment the cost would be $554. At No. 7 the cost would be $496 and with the blower equipment $590. The communication said that either hard or soft coal could be used without changing the equipment. The report was filed.

Civil Service Report.

A list of five names was certified by the civil service board for the purpose of naming two permanent janitors and one temporary janitor for the city schools. The examination was held July 16 and the following names were certified to the board from which to make a selection under the civil service rules:

Edward F. Moran, 356 Broadway, 95%.

James Gorham, 11 Clifton avenue, 95.75%.

Alexander Mains, 193 Greenkill avenue, 96%.

Patrick Lloyd, 16 West Chester street, 94.5%.

Francis Cashin, 102 Lucas avenue, 94%.

The civil service board also certified the following list from which to make an appointment of secretary to the high school principal:

Lillian Lehner, 37 Broadway, 95%.

Katherine Quest, 77 Downs street, 93%.

Delores Cashin, 176 Ten Broeck avenue, 87.5 per cent.

But one name was certified to the board for the position as clerk to the principal. Ruth M. Tongue having passed the non-competitive examination with a percentage of 99.

Discuss Janitor Problem.

After a discussion a suggestion was made that under the civil service rules it would be possible to appoint janitors from the eligible list for a probationary period of three months and this was deemed an advisable precaution.

Judge John G. Van Etten moved that the appointments be for a probationary period of three months beginning September 1, at a salary of $[illegible] per month. Carried.

It was also suggested that since the members of the board did not personally know the men certified to the board, it would be only fair to meet them and learn which were better qualified for the position before the appointments were made. In this way the better men could be selected for the positions.

Flemming Votes "No."

Judge Van Etten moved the election of a janitor from the list certified to fill the vacancy in the high school. The vote was Aye 6, No 1, President Flemming voting "No" and stating that he did so because he deemed it advisable to investigate and interview the men first so that the interests of the board might be protected and so that the man best qualified for the position might be appointed. The men certified were unknown to the board and it was but justice that the best man be appointed and unless the men's qualifications were known the board could not wisely act in the matter.

Trustee Hayes then nominated James Gorhan for the position as janitor to fill the vacancy at the high school. Trustee Beeres seconded the nominated. Carried. Aye 6; President Flemming voting No.

Trustee Van Etten then nominated Alexander Mains for the position at No. 2. Trustee Hayes seconded the nomination. Carried. Aye 6. President Flemming voting No.

Trustee Hayes nominated Patrick Lloyd to fill the temporary vacancy at No. 6, where the janitor is ill. Trustee Van Etten seconded the nomination. Carried. Aye 6. President Flemming voting No.

All of the appointments were for the three months probationary period and at a salary of $85 to commence September 1. If the services are satisfactory at the end of the probationary period the appointments will be permanent. All three of the new appointees take the place of men who have been holding the positions for some time. The present incumbents also took the examinations but failed to qualify.

Routine Business.

Trustee Fowler for the finance committee offered the pay-roll for July amounting to $2,542.44 and bills amounting to $4,612.43 were audited and ordered paid.

The usual contract with District No. 5, town of Ulster for tuition for pupils attending the city schools was authorized and the president was given power to enter into a contract on the usual terms.

Reports for the Teachers' committee on vacancies was filed as was the report of Prof. Michael.

Superintendent Michael was authorized to purchase chemicals and apparatus for the science laboratory for the year for a sum not exceeding $[illegible].

Trustee Beeres for the building committee reported that all of the school buildings were being cleaned preparatory to the opening of schools, that repairs were underway and would be completed for the opening of schools in the fall except the toilets at No. 2 and they would be completed according to contract.

The board then went into executive session and the list of names for secretary to the high school principal was discussed. It was decided that the applicants names be submitted to Prof. Van Ingen and that he make a recommendation to the board.

Likely to Bar Smith and Vare

If They Are Elected in November as a Result of Slush Fund Committee's Work.

Chicago, July 31.—A slush-smeared background for contests to bar Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, from the Senate—if elected in November—has been laid by the Senate's slush fund inquiry into the Illinois primary, it was generally believed in political circles here today, even among Republican leaders.

The fight upon Smith, it was predicted, will be based upon the contribution of $206,225 to his campaign by heads of public utility corporations even while he was serving and continues to serve as chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission. Although friends of Smith deny he knew about the contributions, the political seers believe these gifts will cost him a seat in the Senate.

The Vare fight, according to the same political oracles, will be based partly on the expenditure of some $600,000 in his behalf to win the Republican nomination in Pennsylvania, but chiefly on the refusal of Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, to tell where he obtained a $50,000 contribution handed over to the Vare fund. Cunningham's defiance of the committee developed at the inquiry here and politicians close to the committee predicted it was a death-blow to Vare's chances to sit in the Senate.

The first week's inquiry here also gave the foes of slush a rare contrast of politics as it was played in Illinois and Pennsylvania and as it can be played elsewhere. That came when former Senator Smith W. Brookhart testified he paid out but $6,000 to win the Iowa Republican nomination. It was generally believed here that the Smith and Vare supporters will never hear the end of the Brookhart race.

FAMOUS DETECTIVE FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL ROOM

Atlanta, Ga., July 31.—With a $1,000 reward posted by his employer, Solicitor General John Boykin, and all available city detectives working on the case, little light had been shed early today on the mystery murder of Bert Donaldson, chief investigator for the solicitor general here today. 12 hours after his body was found riddled with bullets in a hotel room.

Donaldson, who had served a prison sentence and reformed, was known as the nemesis of the Atlanta underworld. Singlehanded, he uncovered the operations of a famous million-dollar ring of confidence men, and tracked members of the gang all over the country, to send them to the penitentiary for long terms. He was credited with other brilliant detective exploits.

"Mike" Back Again.

New York, July 31.—"Big Red Mike" McKenna, ex-convict, who packs a gun on all occasions—even on semi-social visits to the parole board, was back in jail today. Mike is charged with taking part in an $8,000 holdup of the Reid Ice Cream Company.

Cummins Funeral Will Be Monday

Members of Iowa Senator's Family Have Tentatively Fixed That Day—State Officials Plan State Funeral if Family Acquiesce.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 31.—Members of the family of the late United States Senator Albert B. Cummins, who succumbed to a sudden attack of angina pectoris late yesterday afternoon, made tentative announcement today that funeral services would be held Monday.

Lieutenant-Governor Clem F. Kimball from his home in Council Bluffs, in the absence of Governor John Hammill, today had set in motion plans for a state funeral contingent upon the approval of the Cummins family.

While it was known that Senator Cummins had been standing the heat badly, his death was a profound shock to his family and friends.

With his two sisters, Misses Anna and Margaret Cummins, who have lived with him since the death of Mrs. Cummins several years ago, the senator returned from Washington at the close of the congressional session and established a summer residence here.

He had been hard at work on his autobiography and apparently was feeling better than usual. He attended a small dinner party that evening and retired in good spirits but at midnight the household was roused and physicians were sent for.

The attack was diagnosed as angina pectoris. The senator obtained relief and spent a comparatively quiet night but as the day advanced yesterday he did not regain his strength and peacefully passed away at 4:15. With him throughout the day were Mrs. Hollis Rawson, his only child, her husband and the Misses Cummins.

The strain of the campaign last spring, in which he was defeated for renomination by Smith W. Brookhart, combined with his arduous work in the Senate had told greatly on him, it was said.

Today the news of his death had brought a flood of messages of sympathy to the family from all parts of the country. A telegram was received by Mrs. Rawson from President and Mrs. Coolidge, which was not made public.

Charges Driver Had Alcohol

Deputy Sheriff Herbert Segelken of Phoenicia Fixes Ford From Nyack Then Arrests Driver for Transporting Liquor.

When a little Ford failed to "ramble right along" Deputy Sheriff Herbert Segelken of Phoenicia, who also conducts the garage at Phoenicia, was called in to see what was the matter. He discovered that the bearings of the Ford were burned out and also that the car contained something which although labled Poland Springs water had every appearance of alcohol. Mr. Segelken after diagnosing the trouble of the Ford also thought he had diagnosed the contents of the bottles and then called the sheriff and U. S. Commissioner A. C. Connelly.

On their instructions he charged the driver of the Ford car with transporting alleged alcohol in violation to the prohibition law. The driver gave his name as Stephen Luba of Nyack. He was brought to Kingston and arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Connelly and when an examination was demanded an adjournment was taken until Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Chris J. Flanagan appeared for Luba and bail was fixed at $500 pending a hearing. The liquor will be analyzed in the meantime.

At the time the Ford car arrived at the Segelken garage it was accompanied by a Buick car but this car was allowed to depart.

In the Ford coupe were found 22 two quart bottles of alleged alcohol and 2 gallon jugs.

Public Schools Employ Many Local People

F. C. Merritt Is Told That 95 Per Cent of Employees in School System Are Kingstonians—Merritt Thought Local People Were Discriminated Against.

F. C. Merritt appeared before the board of education at its regular meeting Friday evening and asked that he be heard on a proposition. He explained that he was appearing by request but did not state who requested him to appear.

He said he understood that there were vacancies to fill on the teaching staff and he had been requested to ask the members of the board why it was that local applicants were not given a chance to secure contracts with the board. The position of musical director was one of the positions to be filled and he inquired if any notice had been given so that local people might seek the position.

President Flemming informed him that the usual notice was given but no advertisements were published. However the position had been filled as had all vacancies, by the teachers' committee which had been empowered to fill them.

Local People Barred.

Mr. Merritt said that he had been told that local people find it hard to get positions in the local schools and that when there was a position open it was filled by an out of town person. He suggested that local people get a chance to fill these positions. He came to inquire and see why it was that the local people apparently had no chance.

The Board's Policy.

President Flemming stated that local people had been employed by the board wherever possible. However there were certain positions which required special qualifications in order to get the state money and that of musical director was one. The state pays the greater portion of the salary and requires that a state licensed teacher be employed.

He further stated that statistics showed that at present there was something like 95 per cent local people employed in the public schools of the city and that Mr. Merritt must have been misinformed.

Mr. Merritt said that he evidently had been, for he did not know that so many local people were employed.

Trustee William D. Brinnier, Jr., called Mr. Merritt's attention to the list of vacancies which the teachers' committee had acted upon for the coming school year. Four of the vacancies had been filled with graduates of the Kingston High School who have either recently completed their studies or have been teaching in other places. The policy of the board had always been to give local teachers the preference where qualified.

Mr. Merritt was supplied with a list of teachers in the schools of the city which showed just how many were local men and women.

Recover Body of Drowned Man

Body of Arnold Thrumann, a Native of Switzerland, Who Drowned in Lake Katrine Friday, Recovered by Grapplers.

The body of Arnold Thrumann, a native of Switzerland, age 25 years, was recovered this morning at 8:15 from Lake Katrine near the spot where he was drowned Friday afternoon at about 5 o'clock. The body was recovered by Judge Webber who with others had been grappling for the body for some time. An attempt had been made to recover the body Friday evening but at dark when the efforts had been of no avail the work was called off until daylight. A heavy green scum over the water prevented working at night.

Thrumann came from New York last April and engaged as a waiter at Lake Katrine Inn.

Friday afternoon he in company with a young lady boarder had gone for a sail on the lake. At the upper end the boat was drawn up on a sloping rock and the two went ashore to take pictures. While there the boat drifted away and Thrumann attempted to swim to it and recover it. At the time the boat was but a short distance from shore. He plunged in the water and when he failed to appear again his companion shouted for help and the attention of people about the lake was attracted to the spot. An attempt was made to recover the body but darkness stopped the work.

Mr. Reilly who conducts the Inn was not positive that deceased had relatives in this country but thought he had an uncle in New York city. The authorities immediately began to investigate this claim and if possible reach relatives and notify them of the accident.

Sergeant Cunningham, Trooper Coons and Deputy Sheriff Ellsworth went to the scene and assisted in the search for the body.

When the body was recovered Coroner W. N. Conner was notified and made an investigation. His verdict was accidental drowning. After taking charge of the body he joined in the search for missing relatives who may claim the body and give instructions for its disposition.

Canton Slayers May Be Found

Whole Nation Now Hunting for Cleveland Man Who Is Believed to Have Been a Party to the Crime.

Canton, O., July 31.—While the greatest galaxy of criminal catchers ever known to this city were gradually drawing tangible evidence out of what once appeared a bottomless mystery, the whole nation joined today in the hunt for Patrick E. McDermott, Cleveland, wanted for questioning in connection with the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher.

Joseph Roach, famous Chicago attorney, whose "clean-up" activities have put no less than sixty officials behind prison bars, went into conference with Earl Hexamer, acting Chief of Police, early today. Roach, late yesterday, was named by Mayor S. M. Swarts as advisory counsel to Hexamer.

A concentrated cleanup drive on the "jungle" is expected to have its inception today.

Arrests in the case are expected momentarily.

The "mystery man" who identified McDermott as the man with whom he was hired to murder the fearless publisher, is being heavily guarded in a jail near here.

He fears that the underworld will strike suddenly for his life.

"The mystery man" was hired, he claims, with McDermott to kill Mellett on the night of July 11. In the eyes of the plotters he turned "yellow" and refused to participate in the crime, the killing was then delayed until July 16.

Mexico City In Mourning

No Outbreaks Reported As Time for Religious Laws to Go In Effect Approaches—Vatican Aroused Over Situation—United States Will Not Interfere.

Mexico City, July 31.—Mexico City was a city of mourning today as great crowds which had assembled for final services in the churches just before midnight dispersed.

The temper of the crowds appeared to be one of grief rather than anger or violence, as soldiers with fixed bayonets marched through the dimly-lit streets, ready to act in any attempt to create trouble.

Vatican Aroused.

Rome, July 31.—The Vatican, it was stated today, regards the Mexican government's attitude as the greatest persecution the church has suffered in modern times since the Russian Communist attacks against members of the church.

The Pope is not impressed with the Mexican government's defense that the action it is taking is in accordance with the law, a high official of the Vatican said today. "It remains an iniquity, even if called by the name of the law," said this official.

"It is a law that must adjust itself to justice."

"The Pope has not protested heretofore against these laws because former President Obregon had the common sense not to adopt anti-church laws, or at least not to apply them with the mad harshness used by President Calles."

Washington Will Not Interfere.

Washington, July 31.—The State Department is keeping in close touch with the situation in Mexico and there was no indication today that a change in the "hands-off" policy of the Coolidge administration is contemplated.

Great concern was expressed in official circles over the possible far-reaching effects of the withdrawal of Catholic priests and the threatened confiscation of church property.

STOPS TO RESCUE MEN IN DISTRESS; JAIL HIS REWARD

Rum Runner, Chased by Coast Guard, Couldn't Pass Up Lost Sailors.

Portland, Ore.—A sentence of two years in prison and a fine of $5,000 is the reward that heroism has brought Capt. Robert Pamphlet, commander of a rum running schooner, in court here. Captain Pamphlet, being chased by a coast guard cutter, stopped long enough to rescue nine men in an open boat on the Pacific.

Captain Pamphlet's schooner was escaping in a raging storm when its lookout spied Captain Sandvig of a disabled ship and eight men in an open boat, and the nine men were taken aboard. By that time the cutter had caught up, though, and the rum runner was seized.

Captain Sentenced.

During his trial Captain Pamphlet asserted that he was 18 miles at sea when he was arrested. The coast guardsmen said it was seven miles. The captain was convicted and sentenced, but he has appealed to a higher court.

The Rum Runner Hove To.

"They may be rum runners, but they are men," is the tribute of Captain Sandvig to his rescuers. "They gave us their food, their clothing, their bunks, and their booze. A big freighter refused to help us, but the rum runner picked us up—and was seized as a result."

Driver Misplaces His Fifty-Passenger Bus

New York.—William O'Donnell of Bridgeport, Conn., would be no man to be intrusted with an elephant. O'Donnell lost his 50-passenger sightseeing bus in New York and tramped the streets for half an hour until he found it parked in front of a police station.

After driving 40 members of the Court Marina lodge of Foresters from Bridgeport to Coney Island, O'Donnell left his bus at the curb while he visited friends.

Neighborhood children climbed aboard. One started it, and away went the bus. Then Patrolman John Koch hove into sight. With the cry, "Cheese it, the cop!" the self-elected sightseers jumped from the bus and ran.

Koch took the machine to the station. An hour later O'Donnell started for Coney to pick up the Foresters for the trip back to Bridgeport.

Buns Tucked Shirt on Girls' Bathing Suits

New York.—Among the costumes the smart girl will not wear this summer at Coney Island, if she follows the advice of Magistrate Fowell, is the snappy, two-piece bathing suit with the multicolored belt and the shirt tucked inside the trunks.

The two-piece suit may be worn. Magistrate Fowell explained to ten none too penitent bathers, only if one interferes with the stream lines of the costume and keeps the shirt outside. A municipal ordinance states definitely, the magistrate said, that the upper garment may not, under any circumstances, be tucked into the lower garment.

Son Kills His Father in Duel at Milwaukee

Milwaukee.—Father and son fought a shotgun duel here in which Joseph D. Owen, sixty-two, was killed. Harold Owens, thirty-three, son and business associate of Joseph, admitted to police he fired two charges of buckshot at his father following a quarrel between his parents. The duel was a culmination of many weeks of discord caused, according to the story related out by the son to police, by his father's abuse of his mother. The younger Owens was held by police.

Half-Pound Infant Loses Death Fight

Coffeyville, Kans.—Following two days of constant attendance by a corps of physicians and nurses, during which time she lived on a diet of milk and water from a medicine dropper, Geraldine May Walton, half-pound infant, died.

Doctors had declared it remarkable that the infant lived. The baby girl, seventh child of Mr. and Mrs. Orest Walton, was nursed in a shoe box warmed by an electric pad.

ROBBERS FOILED BY OLD GRUDGE

Enmity of Villagers Prevents Post Office Looting.

Stiles, Wis.—Because Otto J. Foss and Charles Behnke, who worked side by side in the same store building, nursed a grudge for 18 years, four robbers were frustrated in an attempt to open the safe of the post office here.

Foss, proprietor of the general store, lived in rooms overhead. Behnke, the postmaster, has his office on the other side of a glass partition, the door of which was bolted on the one side and locked on the other to prevent either from entering the other's precinct. The men never spoke. When communication was desired a note was passed under the door.

Both at one time were members of the three-man school board at Stiles. Behnke's child was spanked by the teacher. He took the matter before the board, voting to discharge her. The other member voted to retain, and Foss was left to cast the deciding ballot. He voted in favor of the teacher.

When the robbers arrived they held a meat cleaver over Foss' head, demanding that he unlock the post office safe. He spoke the truth when he said he did not know the combination. Behnke had changed it 18 years ago, when they quarreled and the glass partition was built.

Find Body of Boy Lost in Storm 6 Months Ago

Stockton, Ala.—The body of Harry Mahoney, Hollister Junior college lad, missing since last December, has been found in an isolated section near Gin Flat, six miles east of Hazel Green, not far from the place where Mahoney and his two companions, Russell Hawkins and Jeff Newkirk, camped and hunted during their December vacation.

Two men, employed by the parents of the dead boy, are said to have found the body.

According to the story told by Hawkins and Newkirk, young Mahoney became separated from them during a snowstorm. Since that time, the country has been scoured by dozens of mountaineers without finding trace of the body. At one time the disappearance of the youth was described as a "hoax."

Pickerel Fold Up Like Collapsible Drinking Cup

Cold Springs, N. Y.—Joseph Barry, state game warden in Putnam and West Chester counties, told a story about three fish he found telescoped.

He has two witnesses, he says, to what he found in Lake Gleneida in Caramel. He picked up a 14-inch pickerel, which was believed to be breathing its last. There was sticking out of its mouth for four inches another fish. Warden Barry pulled this out. It was a ten-inch pickerel and, to his astonishment, there was stuck in its mouth a four-inch pickerel.

1,000 Joneses Claim Woman's Huge Estate

London.—The number of Joneses in the world was forcibly demonstrated to public officials recently, when Miss Clara Alice Jones, an aged recluse, died leaving a $250,000 estate.

Joneses from all quarters of the globe tried to establish their right to the fortune. Before the matter was finally settled, the number of claimants totaled more than 1,000. Their claims of kinship to the dead woman failed, however, and her two brothers established their right to the fortune.

Ten Bandits Bind 6 Men, Blow Safe, Get $30,000

Perth Amboy, N. J.—A gang of ten robbers invaded the plant of the Castle Ice Cream company on Gifford street on the outskirts of the town and overpowered the six employees there working. The men were securely bound and placed in a rear room, while the robbers blew the office safe open. Between $20,000 and $30,000, the receipts of the holiday, were taken and the robbers escaped. Later, one of the victims managed to loosen his bonds and notified the police.

Unusual Sentence

Nottingham, Eng.—For stealing to buy a dance dress, Ada Theal, eighteen years old, of Nottingham, in England, was sentenced to go to bed every night at ten o'clock for three years.

Philadelphia.—Adults may live without perturbation as to their health, Dr. Walter Reade Hibbs, pulmonary specialist, says no objection to it from a medical standpoint.

1¢ CENTS A WEEK.

Beginning August 1, the price of The Kingston Daily Freeman delivered to customers in Kingston who pay by the week will be 18 cents a week instead of 15 cents as heretofore. This is made necessary by the increased cost of delivering by carrier, which is a matter beyond our control. This new price is three cents a copy, which has long been the price paid at news stands.

Our contracts with subscribers who have paid in advance at the rate of $7.50 a year will, of course, be carried out. Furthermore, we will continue to receive subscriptions at the present price—$7.50—when paid an entire year in advance, thus eliminating costs of soliciting and collecting.

BOYS BURIED TO CHILTON AS TANK EXPLODES

Two boys had a narrow escape from death Wednesday when the pressure tank which supplies water to the Greenmoss Clover House on the Hasbrouck road, near Hopewell, exploded. The tank was located in the basement and Morris Shulman and his brother, Mortimer, were in the room directly above it and were blown to the ceiling by the explosion. Then dropped through the wrecked flooring directly upon the apparatus below. Their mother had left the room but a minute before with their four year old sister. She was thrown down in the hall by the explosion but recovered quickly and ran back to the room to hear the latest knowledge of her sons in the basement. The boys were rushed to a hospital in Poughkeepsie. Mortimer is in a critical condition with compound fractures of both legs and other injuries. His brother is not badly injured, but is suffering from shock.

Dies from Effects Of Electric Fan

Saugus, Mass., July 31.—Roger E. Tingley, 26, widely known Marathon runner, went to sleep with an electric fan blowing on him during the hot spell.

Today Tingley was dead from throat paralysis and physicians said the electric fan was to blame.

First Locomotive to Make Mile a Minute

The thrill of traveling a mile a minute by rail was first experienced in 1848, when the Antelope, a 10-ton engine built under the direction of Superintendent Minot of the Boston & Maine railroad, covered the 26 miles between Boston and Lawrence in just 26 minutes. The engine had single drivers, six feet in diameter.

Every detail was carefully arranged to give the new engine a chance to break all previous records. Minot selected an engineer named Pemberton to drive the locomotive. Pemberton was reluctant at first, but when Minot threatened to take the throttle himself, he agreed to try. Minot rode with him.

Men were sent over the road to spike down all switches and see that everything was in perfect order. It was before telegraphy had been introduced and to run a mile a minute required careful preparation.

A large crowd gathered at the station and amid cheers and waving of hats, the Antelope began its historic run. Half way to Lawrence, Minot looked at his watch. Fourteen minutes had elapsed. He urged Pemberton to get more speed and Pemberton pulled the throttle wide open. The engine responded and when the train was brought to a stop at the station, Minot's watch showed just 26 minutes had elapsed since the start.—Railway Life.

English Art Dealers Have Own Tribunal

One of the strangest tribunals in England sits at regular intervals in an upper room at the corner of King street and St. James' street, west, in the center of the great art world of London.

It is the antique dealers' "High Court of Justice," to which any of the 550 members of the British Antique Dealers' association has the right to appeal. Its judges, who sometimes number as many as 20, include some of the world's greatest experts on precious stones, old china, tapestries, pictures and antique furniture.

Disputes arising out of the sale of an antique of more than ordinary importance are often referred to the court for arbitration, and if they think fit, the judges have the right to call in independent art experts.

It is to protect the interests of antique dealers and safeguard the honor of their industry that this tribunal has been established.

Foolhardy Feat

For five shillings ($1.25) an English steeplejack performed a feat so dangerous that a film star would probably ask a small fortune for doing the same thing.

As a result of an argument with another steeplejack over the merits of their respective bicycles, this man had his machine hauled to the top of a 90-foot chimney. With smoke belching from the chimney, the steeplejack calmly mounted his bicycle and balanced himself on the narrow ledge for two minutes. The other steeplejack then mounted the chimney and paid over the five shillings which had been won by the performance of this daring feat.

Gems From California

In one mine near Ramona, Calif., the tourmaline crystals are often gigantic, some being five inches in diameter, fifteen pounds or so in weight and dark green to opaque, whilst other smaller ones are a deep rich green and classed as gems. The famous Pala Chief mine near Pala produces not only the commercially valuable lepidolite (lithia mica) from which comes our lithia tablets, but also kunzite and gem tourmalines of red, blue and green—as well as Spodumene, both white and lavender—truly one of the most remarkable mines on our entire globe.—Los Angeles Times.

Two fool Jackasses, say: "Get this dope?
We're tied together with a piece of rope."
Said one to the other, "You may come my way,
While I take a nibble at the new mown hay."

"I won't," said the other, "You come with me,
For I, too, have some hay, you see."
So they got nowhere, just pawed the dirt,
And, oh, by golley! that rope did hurt!

Then they faced about, these stubborn mules,
And said: "We're just like human fools;
Let's pull together; I'll go your way,
Then you come with me, and we'll both eat hay."

Well, they ate their hay, and they liked it too
And swore to be comrades, good and true.
As the sun went down they were heard to bray,
"Ah, this is the end of a perfect day."

Now, get this lesson, don't let it pass;
All people can copy from the poor jackass,
By pulling together, 'tis the only way,
To put yourself on the map to stay.

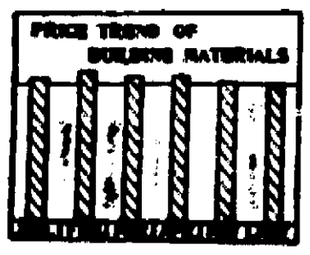
HOMES COST LESS.

Babson Park, Mass., July 31. (Special)—Real estate boards in various cities and towns throughout the country have been saving of late more than one individual from making an unwise commitment in real estate for a home. They have been coming to the front commendably in driving the real estate shark out of the market where he has been feasting on inexperienced families wishing to buy or build a home. Such real estate boards have also been active in arranging a proper zoning and restrictions protecting the home owner. Of late, however, many of them have acknowledged a gradual recession not only in building but in the price of building material. This means that on the whole homes are cheaper to build today than they have been for some time.



The month of February has been the most expensive to build a home in so far as building materials go this year to date. Looking back over the past six months we find the month of June was the cheapest in this respect. There has been a steady drop in the price trend of building materials since April.

Are Automobiles Over Advertised?

People have told us that after reading glowing advertisements of new automobiles that claim to revolutionize industry, they were greatly disappointed after seeing and riding in the car.

We have been criticized also.

Auburn owners tell us that we understate the many wonderful things about the new Auburn cars.

But that, frankly, is a part of the Auburn policy.

Perhaps you have noticed in every Auburn automobile advertisement we have a unique way of proving all our claims.

We simply say — See the new Auburn, test it, compare it with any other car, drive it and if the Auburn does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy.

Our aim at the Auburn factory is to build the very best automobile in every way possible. We let experienced motorists decide for themselves. This policy has increased our sales at the factory over 200%.

"Z" ENGINES are Quality-Built Through and Through

WHEN we say that the "Z" Engine is one of the finest built small stationary engines on the market, we are basing our statement on actual facts. If we could take you through the huge modern plant and let you see for yourself the extremely careful workmanship that is put into these engines you would realize that every part is built as carefully as the parts in your automobile. No slipshod methods are permitted. Working parts must fit to within a fraction of the thickness of a hair. Has fewer parts subject to wear . . . and those parts are carefully made . . . are drop forged and specially heat treated.

All this means longer life, more power and freedom from trouble, as over 400,000 users will gladly tell you. Every "Z" engine delivers more power than its rating calls for—and it will do it year-in and year-out without "rime off." Your money goes further when invested in a "Z."

Let us show you this engine. Compare it part for part and you will note at once its greatly superior quality. 1½ to 30 h. p.

TURKISH PALACE WILL BE CASINO

Yildiz Kiosk, on the Bosporus to Be Opened for Gambling Purposes.

Washington.—Yildiz palace is to be a Monte Carlo on the Bosporus, according to an announcement from Constantinople. The Turkish government, endeavoring to put its surplus imperial palaces to some profit, is said to have closed with Italian concessionaires, who will convert the former Ottoman White House into a casino.

"Yildiz Kiosk is the full name of the palace," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C., "and it is a name which can serve as well in the near future as it has in the past—Yildiz Kiosk, the pavilion of the star. Lucky or unlucky? That is not a new question at Yildiz.

"For its old master, Sultan Abd-ul-Hamid II, the star probably can be called a lucky one. Any sultan who reigned 33 years was fortunate. True he was turned out in the end with little more ceremony than was accorded Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, when they were ejected from a far grander palace at Versailles. But 33 years is a fairly long lease on a view of which it has been said, 'No other sovereign on the globe can contemplate from b's chamber windows a scene which approaches this.'

"The view that Yildiz commands is the Bosporus and the Sea of Marmora. Within the sweep of the eye lie palaces on both shores of the storied strait; the needle minarets of Constantinople's quarters, Stamboul, Pera and Scutari; the Golden Horn, that impudent spit of land where 27 sultans were born to terrify Europe for 300 years; and, finally, the colorful parade of ships of the nations in and out of the Black sea.

On Watery Main Street.

"To appreciate the setting of the Yildiz palace one must first fix in mind the geography of its position. The Bosporus is a Main street. The Sea of Marmora is its open common or park beyond which 'the street' narrows again at the Dardanelles. Like the great avenues every American is familiar with, the Bosporus has its thickly populated downtown business districts which, in this case, are the quarters of Constantinople. The open Black sea takes the place of the open country toward which our 'Bosporus avenue' leads and as the south of the city is left behind magnificent suburban residences and palaces command one's attention right and left.

"On the left, soon after one leaves the city sliding north, appears a magnificent palace stretching along the shore for a third of a mile. This is the Dolma Bagtche, the true Versailles palace of the Turkish empire. It cost $15,000,000. Sultan Abd-ul-Mejid tripped on a doorsill as he entered with the proud architects and builders to inspect the newly completed palace. That was enough for him. He left immediately and never set foot in the palace again. Dolma Bagtche was too grand for Abd-ul Hamid's taste, so he had built for himself Yildiz on the dominant hill a mile to the north. And close to it one sees the private, minareted mosque he built of the same white marble.

"Yildiz Kiosk is a three-story palace. It would pass for the fine country residence of a rich gentleman. There is very little that is Turkish about its architecture and a very great deal that is French. It is set in a park surrounded by staunch walls.

Abd-ul Hamid Reclusive in Palace.

"Narrow-minded old Abd-ul Hamid, who prohibited the use of dynamos in Constantinople because he confused them with dynamite, never went into his city. The city never peeped within his walls. That was forbidden. So it came to pass that Abd-ul Hamid did not dare to look into the heart of Constantinople except with a telescope. Finally when the young Turks, in 1908, resuscitated the constitution the Sultan had suppressed, this people crowded in to see what kind of a palace the old man had shut himself up in. They found the gardens in bad shape for all the efforts of an army of gardeners reported to number 900. There was a small pottery factory and a completely equipped carpentry shop. The traditions of Mohammedans from the sultan down require them to learn a trade.

"Dr. Edwin Grosvenor, then professor in Robert college a few miles north of Yildiz on the same bank of the Bosporus, describes the reception rooms of the palace as he saw them when the sultan received Gen. Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, as minister from the United States. The reception room is a large, high-studded apartment fronting on the Bosporus. The Ottoman ministers of state are drawn up in line on the right of the sovereign, one hand on the hilt of the sword and the other upon the breast in an attitude of profound humility. The envoy presents his credentials and states in his diagnomen what he has to say. This the dragoman translates in Turkish to the minister of foreign affairs, who, in turn, reports it in a low-toned voice to the sultan. An American is distended to see in the reception room the words "G. Washington" on an elaborate picture which constitutes the principal ornament of the chamber. The British artist whose work in this direction gladdened was a likeness of our national hero and first president."

GEOLOGIST FINDS TRACES OF VANISHED MOUNTAIN TOP

Professor Says Superb Peak 10,000 Feet High Once Towered Above Cascade Range in Oregon.

Portland, Ore.—Rising to a height of at least 10,000 feet, a superb mountain once towered above that part of the Cascade range in Oregon which is now marked by the Three Sisters peaks.

Edwin T. Hodge, professor of economic geology of the University of Oregon, "discovered" the ancient mountain while making a scientific study of the topography of the region.

The professor has named the vanished peak Mount Multnomah and has carried his envisioned exploration of it so far as to be able to picture it as a magnificent cone, created in the Oligocene age by intermittent eruptions.

The great eminence collapsed either through a tremendous explosion, like the one that decapitated Mount Krakatau in the East Indies, or through the sinking of the underlying structure long before man arrived to scale it, says Professor Hodge.

Disappearance of the mountain left a caldera eight miles in diameter, which may later have filled with water, but the lake, like the mountain it succeeded, was destined to pass from the scene. Rivers from without tore down its walls and the water ran off, leaving a valley.

"By this time," finds Professor Hodge, "the erstwhile site of mountain and lake enlarged, was enjoying a moist warm climate and camels and diminutive horses grazed there. The peace and quiet of this tranquil vale, however, was not to last. Volcanic action was resumed and peaks were thrown up, namely, Middle, South Sisters, Black Crater, Mount Scott and lesser upthrusts forming the Cascade range. They were imposing, but underwent a glacial period on this historic battleground of the elements.

"The Oregon fault 'block' again gave way, leveling the mountains, but still again volcanic action ensued, bringing into being Belknap peak with its great expanses of lava and smaller flows around the base of South Sister."

Suit, 600 Years Old, Is Decided by Court

Paris.—The Court of Appeals at Aix En Provence has just gotten around to the settling of a lawsuit instituted 600 years ago.

The suit concerned ownership of 12,000 acres of rich pasture lands at Crau, near the Italian border, a former domain of the royal house of Anjou which was first involved in the litigation in the year 1378. Three coheirs have since been disputing possession of the valuable lands. The Court of Appeals has now decided it should be divided, ending a case which is something like a record, even in this part of the world where courts are not noted for their speed.

A local statistician figured out that lawyers' fees during the centuries the case has been fought out in the courts during a half dozen regimes would have sufficed to buy the property 21 times over.

Baker Gives Bank Aide Each a Year's Salary

New York.—A year's salary to virtually every employee of the First National bank was the gift of George F. Baker as he sailed for Europe, chief among reported gifts of the month of the first of this year.

The gifts were made unconditionally to each employee up to the rank of assistant cashier in the bank's service two years or more, and were accompanied by a personal note to each signed, "Affectionately, George F. Baker."

The presentations were not made, however, until after Mr. Baker's ship had left. This modesty is a characteristic of the "Father of Wall Street," who has given upward of $50,000,000 to charity.

Historic Swedish Jail

Outermost prison in Sweden is the oldest jail in that country and one of the most historically interesting in Europe. One of its exhibits is that of 1,000 skeletons of the Swedes who died in defending Visby the young city. Many of the skeletons are still shackled in court of chain mail. Fine old furniture from all parts of Europe is also on display in the prison yard today.

Wanted a Change

Dorothy yawned and announced: "I do wish that school was over, and summer was over, and I had a new teacher." Her mother looked up and smiled. "Why do you wish all that?" she asked. Dorothy yawned again. "Well," said she, "it is about time for getting the same number?"

A Vivid Blue Flat Crepe is Lightly Embroidered in Multicolored Beads.

Recent reports from Paris, where so many of the smart set have assembled, lead one to feel confident in advising fringe as a trimming for dinner gowns and as a charming and graceful relief from elaboration, which is expressed by beading of one sort or another. Chanel has had great success with her several fringed gowns. They are always among those present in Paris these nights, and are worn on this side of the Atlantic by women of excellent taste and indisputable social prestige.

Untrimmed heavy crepe satin dresses, provided they are well chosen in color, are stunning for evening. Chartreuse is one of the colors frequently seen, and praline or candy pink continues to be impressive against a background largely made of blue.

Lace is a large factor in evening clothes just now, and there is some indication of a renewed interest in silk embroideries, but these, of course, tend toward elaboration, and it pleases the well-turned-out woman to appear in sparkling sequins one night and in unadorned crepe satin the next, with fringed chiffon as another alternative.

When one patronizes the haute couture, one may well go in for untrimmed gowns, for it stands to reason that a lack of ornamentation is made up in intricacy of cut. Unobtrusive trimming implies carefully cut and made gowns.

On the other hand, one sees women in Deauville and Biarritz wearing gowns as besprinkled with brilliants as the summer sky is with twinkling stars.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BLACK-BACKED JACKAL

"I come from Africa, I do," said the Black-Backed Jackal.

"If anyone wants to hear that important fact it is all right.

"But if no one wants to hear that important fact I am very sorry, yet I am not so very sorry.

"If I were so very sorry I wouldn't yell it at the top of my lungs—wherever the top of my lungs may be.

"In fact, if I should be quite honest I would say that I really wasn't sorry at all.

"For I don't care if anyone doesn't want to hear that I came from Africa.

"It doesn't make any difference to me, and it doesn't make any difference to Africa.

"Of that I am quite certain.

"Africa doesn't care about such things. At least, if Africa does care, Africa never told me about it, and anyway I don't imagine a country or a continent would care about such a thing.

"A continent is too important to mind little slights.

"Well, I come from Africa, as I have said several times, and no matter if one should hate to hear it, or if two or three or four or five or six should hate to hear it, the fact is the fact.

"There is no reason why one should hate to hear it, however, no reason at all.

"It's an interesting enough fact—facts go. Although all facts are the same.

"Some facts are dull. Pe[illegible] choice.

"Some[illegible] that children can[illegible] choice, nor even

"I Come From Africa."

can grown-ups always take their choice.

"Facts will be thrust at them very often whether they want them or not.

"That is often the way with facts. They're pushing, quite pushing at times.

"I love to talk to myself, as you have guessed or imagined or thought.

"I like to talk to the zoo, or rather to the mammals or small animal house where I live, in this fashion.

"Yes, I thoroughly enjoy myself.

"But I have heard that others enjoy me, too. I really have heard that.

"So I have come to the conclusion that the facts I tell must be pleasant or interesting facts.

"They liked me, I am told, and by 'they' I mean the keepers and people, because I am not a fuss.

"I take what I get and I see that it agrees with me. I don't get sick.

"Of course some can't help getting sick.

"But that isn't my point. My point is that I don't get sick.

"I don't quite know why one speaks of a point when one wants to say something decided and true.

"Well, I thrive in my zoo house. I am no trouble to any one.

"I am beautiful. I am to be admired. I am in a house with small animals or mammals, and I compliment them by being with them, for I belong to the noble dog family, I do.

"I don't cause any one trouble, and so I am liked. That is one of the best ways of getting liked.

"Yes, I've found it worth.

"And so, my friends and neighbors, do not say to yourselves that the Black-Backed Jackal fellow is a good talker, but say to yourselves and to me, if you wish:

"'The Black-Backed Jackal is a fine fellow, he is.'

"Such a speech would delight me. Surely you will want to delight the Black-Backed Jackal, in other words, myself!'

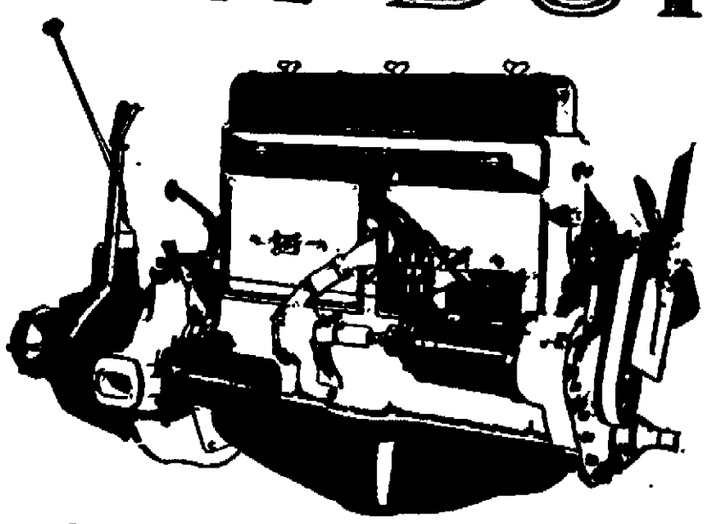
the GREATEST BUICK EVER BUILT



Vibrationless beyond belief

The Buick Motor Company now presents the 1927 Buick, with an engine vibrationless beyond belief.

Never in all the twenty-two years of Buick success, has Buick engineering and manufacturing leadership made itself more apparent.

Acquaintance with the performance and intrinsic value of this great new car will fix firmly in your mind the conviction that money can buy nothing finer.

Four vital engine improvements make the new Buick Valve-in-Head engine vibrationless beyond all previous experience, at every speed.

The new Vacuum Ventilator removes crankcase vapors before they have an opportunity to harm the oil, and before their fumes can filter through the floorboards to passengers.

Thermostatic control of cooling makes starting even easier than heretofore.

A new giant-tooth transmission subdues transmission noise. And a new muffler type gives a new degree of quietness to the exhaust, with no loss of power.

Bifold hood wheels from wind-noise, make driving easier and safer.

SCHOOL DAYS

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

AT 21—Achmed Abdullah Set About Founding a British-Moslem Empire.

"AT TWENTY-ONE I wanted to succeed, very brilliantly, in my career, that of an army officer; I wanted to be instrumental in founding a Pan-Islamic league to work in close harmony with the British empire and, in the course of the centuries, to bring this same empire, civilizationally and religiously, completely under the sway of Islam. I wanted to explore certain uncharted regions in southwestern and central Africa with the intention of getting a jump ahead of the French and counteracting their political influence in Africa. I wanted, later on, to persuade the British-Indian government to send me as a political free-lance agent to central Asia, there to stir up trouble against the Russians and pave the way throughout Turkestan and Mongolia, for this gorgeous British-Moslem dream empire of mine.

"Being very young, I suffered furthermore from less weighty ambitions. I wanted to win the derby with a snow-white little Arab filly that I was training and I wanted to be socially well known in every European capital, to have people point me out in restaurants, streets and salons, with the single telling, if ungrammatical, comment:

"'That's him!'

"But aside from all that, at twenty-one I was a junior subaltern in the British-Indian army, Sam Browne's Horses, but serving temporarily in the Sudan, with the First Sudanese camel corps. Too, I was very busy studying the Tibetan language, and Tibetan customs and religion, as, later in the year, I was to accompany the Younghusband expedition to Tibet and Lhasa, the Forbidden City."—Achmed Abdullah.

TODAY: Alas for Napoleonic ambitions! Captain Achmed Abdullah, instead of being the founder and prime ornament of a Moslem empire, is merely the writer of novels and short stories, living in Greenwich village, New York. But his present comparatively lowly labors pay much better; they bring him many paragraphs in "Who's Who," a few varieties of best books, and he requires no squad of secret service men to guard his life, but walks the streets of the Village a free man.

Mother's Cook Book

There is no mystery about happiness whatever. Put in the right ingredients and it must come out.

Whose will observe the wonderful providence of God shall have wonderful providences to observe.

CAKE-MAKING AND BAKING

INEXPERIENCED cooks do not value the process of baking. The best of mixed and prepared cakes will be ruined if not properly baked.

First of all have all the materials for making the cake ready at hand before beginning to put things together, as often we find a lack of something, which changes the plans.

The time was when much creaming of butter and stirring of sugar was thought to be the only way to make a butter cake; but busy days teach us short methods.

The shortening, if softened, not melted, will mix with the sugar in a very short time, while hot water or milk (if hurried for time) is used; then with a good beating add the eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition.

Plain Cake.

Three tablespoonfuls of softened butter, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one and three-quarters cupfuls of sifted flour. Add flavoring and bake in a hot oven. After greasing cake tins, dust with flour; this will help to remove the cake without breaking. The cake that is baked with as little flour as will hold it up makes a much more tender and delicate cake. Have the oven very hot for layer cake and bake from ten to twelve minutes. For a loaf cake forty minutes or more is needed. Divide the time into quarters for baking; the first quarter, or ten minutes, it should begin to rise; the second quarter it should finish rising and begin to brown; the third quarter, it should finish browning and begin to shrink from the pan; the last quarter finishes the baking. If a cake cracking as it is taken from the oven that shows that it is still cooking and not entirely done. Put it back for a few minutes.

When baking a sheet or loaf, or in fact any shaped cakes, keep the cake dough around the edges as it goes into the oven, as all cakes have a tendency to humo up in the center, and a level cake is more apt to result.

Beat cake before the egg whites are added, then fold them in, stirring lightly to keep in all the air. This is in regard to cakes where the egg whites and yolks are separately beaten.

Woodstock Hotel Will Open Today

The Woodstock Valley Hotel, formerly the Woodstock Lodge, located in the center of Woodstock Village, will open its doors this evening, after having been closed since last fall.

The hotel property was purchased at the close of the season last year by Miss Elinor Rixson, an artist, who has made her home in Woodstock for a number of years. Miss Rixson during the winter organized a corporation, of which she is president, to carry on and manage the hotel. The hotel property for many months has been in the hands of painters and decorators as well as carpenters, plasterers and plumbers. New furniture and furnishings and equipment have been installed.

Dinner will be served this evening at and after 6 o'clock. After today the hotel will be open each day and evening. The hotel will be controlled by the corporation that has been organized, but the active management will be in the hands of Miss Hannah Corbett, who comes to Woodstock, direct from Washington. She had had wide experience in this line. American foods will be served but the chef and waiters will be Japanese.

Deadly Bowie Knife

The bowie knife is named for Col. James Bowie, who introduced it in Texas. According to one account, Colonel Bowie had occasion to fight with a certain enemy and found it so effective that he equipped his men with long, dagger-shaped knives. They grew, however, wary on who edge only. Since knives quite similar in design were in use in Mexico it is probable that the idea was gained from them.

WHY

Winking Keeps the Eyes in Good Condition

Some people, especially those of a nervous temperament, wink much more frequently than others. It has been estimated that a fast winker will move his eyelids no less than 20,000 times during an ordinary waking day. In each a case the eyelids travel about 23,000 inches in a day and, should the individual live to the age of fifty, the total distance covered would be about 7,000 miles.

Fortunately, it requires no thought to wink, since the movement is quite instinctive, just like breathing. A wink is not a long operation and the whole performance occupies only two-fifths of a second. Even when you are reading, the process continues, but it is so rapid that you are not conscious of an interruption.

Try to see how long you can go without winking and you will find that you cannot hold the eyelids still for any great length of time, writes S. Leonard Bastin in St. Nicholas. As a matter of fact, winking is a very essential movement, for by its means the eyeballs are kept clean and moist. The moisture which is continually being passed over the eyes comes from the tear glands, one of which is situated at the inner corner of each eye. It is quite easy to see the entrance into the gland by looking into a mirror and gently pulling down the lower lid of the eye. The opening is not much larger than a pin point, but it leads to a passage which connects with the nose. It is on this account that your eyes water so much when you have a cold.

Why Pupils Should Be Taught to Read Aloud

Most reading is silent, books, magazines and newspapers are read for the benefit of the reader alone. But there are times when it is necessary to read aloud, and at times a great audience must be brought under the influence of the [illegible]

[illegible] who have [illegible] discourse have [illegible] out of reading aloud, [illegible] in the [illegible] ness, to [illegible] on the delivery [illegible] held in them [illegible] once becomes [illegible] tolerance trails of [illegible] ble.

Every pupil [illegible] the good [illegible] reading aloud. The [illegible] shall insist on the head being held well up, the enunciation clear, the delivery brisk without undue rapidity and the tone intelligently modulated. No pupil thus taught will fail to be grateful for the training in after years.—Providence Journal.

Why We Clink Glasses

Roman gladiators were accustomed to drink a glass of wine before fighting. Two glasses of wine were brought by friends of one or the other gladiator, and to guard against treachery through the poisoning of the wine in one of the glasses the gladiators would pour the wine from one glass into the other until it was thoroughly mixed. Later it became a mere custom to show a friendly spirit between persons drinking together, and when the danger of poisoned wine was past the actual act of pouring the wine from one glass to another was changed to merely touching the glasses together.

Why Latin Was Dropped

The difficulty found in speaking Latin was the same as that of old English. Sentences in Latin and old English were very long, sometimes as long as a long paragraph. Men spoke in sentences of 400 and 500 words. While one spoke all others had to sit by and listen until he had finished. Today it has been decided that a sentence should not last longer than 35 seconds or contain more than 15 or 16 words.

Why Ours Gets Sunburn

Sunburn is due to the effect of [illegible] or long rolls of the sea upon the internal ear. What are called the semi-circular canals of the internal ear are certain spaces filled with fluid. They act as a spirit level to determine our place in space. The pronounced movements of the ship on a rolling sea make undue demands upon these organs and the symptoms of seasickness develop.

Why Horseshoe Is Lucky

Anything in the shape of a crescent has always been considered a thing to bring luck. It is made of iron, and since early times iron has been a good luck metal and, [illegible] mythology having always held the horse to be a lucky animal, the combination of the crescent, the iron and the horse has become a lucky emblem.

Why Air Looks Blue

The distance [illegible] you and the hills is filled with [illegible] particles of dust and other [illegible] rays and when you see it not blue but the reflection of the sun's rays from the dust particles in the air, the color being due to the angle at which the light from the sun strikes the particles and to the character of the particles.

Why Cactus Have Ribs

Scientists do not quite agree upon this subject. As any [illegible] particle exposed to the [illegible] would absorb moisture and expand, the ribs represent an economy of nature.

Spot Made Famous by Genius of Alexander

The site of the most brilliant coup of Alexander the Great's campaign in India has been located by the eminent archeologist, Sir Aurel Stein, according to dispatches received in this country.

In a section of the hills of Upper Swat known as Torwal, near the northern frontier, Sir Aurel believes that he has identified the site of the fortress of Aornos, captured from the warlike hill tribes by Alexander in 327 B. C. According to the classical historians the stronghold was perched on a rock over the river Indus and had even resisted the attacks of the legendary Hercules.

The particular features of the rough and rocky region which suggested this site are said to agree more closely with the account of the Greek historian Arrian than a previous tentative location at Mahaban. The strategic value of this hill country has been appreciated and utilized by petty chieftains down to the present day, and it is only recently that conditions have been sufficiently settled to allow archeological exploration.

Pretty Indian Legend

Long ago, before the white man came to this country, a great famine spread over the land, says the Detroit News, in telling of the legends of Michigan Indians. One day a mother bear with her two hungry little cubs, walked along the shore of Wisconsin and gazed wistfully over at Michigan. Finally, driven by the pangs of hunger, she plunged into Lake Michigan, followed by her two babies, and struck out for the Michigan shore. When only a few miles from the land of plenty, one cub, too exhausted to go further, sank. She struggled to reach shore with the other, but, it, too, sank. She herself at last reached shore and sank exhausted. As she gazed out across the waters, two beautiful islands slowly arose to mark the graves of her children. And these are called Manitous, meaning the home of departed spirits.

Apaches Indians' Shields

The heavy iron sliding vent by knights in the days of chivalry had its prototype in the rawhide slide of the American plains Indians. While the design imprinted upon the iron defender of the medieval warrior was symbolic, it was not magical like those emblems painted upon the elliptical rawhides worn by the companies of the University of Pennsylvania veterans, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Art alone did not prompt the American Indian to embellish his defensive weapons, but a belief in the supernatural power of color led to designs to ward off evil, according to Henry Usher Hunt, curator of the section of general ethnology of the museum.

Uni-Slyke's Win Industrial Game

Stanley Colvin, of the Uni-Slyke club, allowed the K. & M. Silk Mills one hit and his teammates pounded four Silk Mills' pitchers for fourteen hits and thirteen runs, winning the game, 13-1, at the Athletic Field, Friday night. The Uni-Slyke are in second place, one-half game behind the Gasmen, and still have a chance to tie the leaders for first place.

Beside pitching good ball, Colvin also distinguished himself by knocking four hits, one being good for three bases. His support was very good.

Mains was on the mound for the Silkmen when the game started, but didn't stay around long, giving way to Bowers in the fourth inning. Bowers was next in the parade, followed by R. Fitzgerald and G. Fitzgerald.

The Combination team scored three runs in the first inning, which were enough to win the game. G. Fitzgerald started them off, booting Ploskie's grounder. Cassidy walked. Colvin scored both runners with a single to left field. Colvin scored on Butler's single to right. The fourth inning was their biggest inning, scoring six runs. They scored four more in the fifth.

Colvin lost control in the third inning for a brief spell, and gave two walks, one which developed into the Silk Mills' only run. Only one man reached first base after that inning.

The score:

Miss Wills Has A Hard Match

In Semi-Finals of Invitation Tourney At East Hampton—National Champion Not Very Impressive As Yet.

East Hampton, N. Y., July 31.—Miss Helen Wills today meets the best player she has yet been called upon to face since her return to tournament tennis. In the semi-final of the invitation tourney of the club here she is to play Mrs. Edna Rockwell Roesser.

Ordinarily such a match would be regarded as a walkover for the champion, but it is being awaited with real interest today, for the champion has not yet demonstrated that she is ready for really first-class play.

Yesterday in defeating Mrs. Frederick Schmitz of New York, 6-2, 6-1, Miss Wills played tennis that was at times pretty bad. She showed plainly the effects of her illness, and it is obvious that she will have to improve a great deal if she is to come through against Miss Mary Browne in the final round on Sunday.

Miss Browne is playing in splendid form and yesterday in defeating Mrs. Julia Mallory, she played some of the best tennis she has produced since the war.

ALL STARS WILL PLAY AT SAUGERTIES SUNDAY

The All Stars will be the attraction tomorrow afternoon at Saugerties Fair Grounds. These two clubs met on the Fair Grounds in this city and the All Stars won by a 1 score.

The Saugerties club has added several new players lately and they expect to give the locals a severe pressing. The local line-up will be the same as used in Ravena last Sunday.

Must Be Put to Use

Character is the result of the cultivation of the highest and noblest qualities in human nature, and putting the qualities to practical use.—Ellen Gates Wilson.

Champion Wins By Narrow Margin

Eastern Point, Conn., July 31.—Congratulations were showered Miss Glenna Collett today for her spectacular victory in the final match here for the Shennecossett trophy. Although she was four down to Miss Maureen Orcutt, the young metropolitan champion, at the twelfth hole, Miss Collett staged a sensational comeback and retained the trophy by the narrow margin of one up.

The American champion had a 42 and a 40 for a total of 82, while Miss Orcutt turned in a 40 and a 42 for an 83.

Odd French Custom

In many French homes the old custom of kissing on one on a birthday is still kept up. It is believed that a child, in order to be happy, must step on a broom the night before the eleventh day of June.

Busy Week For Colonials

Will Play Red Caps on Monday at Fair Grounds—Pittsburgh Here Next Sunday.

The Penn Red Caps, a stellar club which has not yet cavorted about the Fair Grounds diamond this season, will give the Colonials a busy week-end although they are scheduled for but one game. This club which will be at the local park for one game Sunday afternoon has established a healthy reputation in the New York sporting circles. The Red Caps are of the caliber of the Bushwicks and the Farmers and more than once have pounced upon these Metropolitan District clubs.

Tuesday the Colonials will meet the Poughkeepsie Beckwiths at the Fair Grounds in the first match of a six-game series with the Bridge City outfit. On the following day the locals will go to Poughkeepsie for the second contest in the series. Having met twice this season and each won a contest the series is bound to be full of lively playing. The next big job for the locals is the Pittsburgh Pirate match for Sunday, August 8. This will be the locals' second big league match of the season.

Colonials Beat Stottville Club

Phelpsmen Find Harrington for Twenty-three Hits and Win by a 16-1 Score—McMara Hurls for Local Club.

Lefty Harrington of the Capitol District, who forced the Phelpsmen to bow in homage to his mighty arm a week ago at Ravena, again played host to the Colonials on their second up-state visit. Once again Lefty sought tribute for his powerful wing but this time he was presiding on the mound for Stottville, a little village back of Hudson where Manager Phelps took his men Friday night. This time the Colonials were bound to "get" the portsider so they laid in wait for him every inning and battered down everything he had to offer. When the match ended the Kingstonians had collected 23 husky blows and the score was 16 to 1 in the Colonials' favor.

The first two frames were the hardest for the enemy twirler for in these two sessions the locals made thirteen runs, four the first and nine the second. Then Lefty tightened up slightly and kept the locals down to three runs for the balance of the contest.

Johnny McMara was on the mound for the Phelpsmen. Six hits, very well scattered, was all the Stottville crowd could get from Johnny. They got their lone run in the third inning.

McCue Gets Ninth.

Bernie McCue caught hold of his ninth home run of the season during the match. Bernie also got three other husky hits. O'Brien also got four hits out of four chances. One of the hits by the Colonial first sacker was a triple.

Tagging Major League Bases

The Browns succumbed to the cyclonic Yanks in the eleventh and the Hugmen triumphed, 10 to 8, for their ninth successive win. It was Shocker's fifteenth triumph of the season.

Babe Ruth chipped in with his thirty-second homer, but he is five homers or 22 games behind the record.

The Indians kept in the swim by throttling the Athletics again, Shaute outpitching Rommel.

The White Sox took the Senators into camp again, this time by a 5 to 4 score. The win put them at the head of the second division.

The Red Sox, who have been fielding real big league form on the western clubs, beat the Tigers 4 to 3.

Harold Carlson of the Phillies, who dotes on licking the Pirates, handcuffed them 6 to 1. Kremer had plenty of stuff but couldn't control it.

The Cardinals whipped the Giants, 5 to 2, and advanced to within two and one-half games of the league leaders. Homers by Flowers and Bell gave them the decision over Fitzsimmons.

Burleigh Grimes dazzled the Cubs with his spitter and the Robins won, 4 to 1. Johnny Butler, the vegetarian who is now eating steak, continued his great hitting and knocked in three runs.

Kingston G. & E. Is Awarded Cup

The Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company cup to be given each year to the district having the best kept property was awarded Wednesday to the Kingston District of which T. A. Corby is operating manager. Last year the cup was awarded to Newburgh, the first time an award of this nature was made.

The cup was presented by R. B. MacGuinness of Poughkeepsie and received by Mr. Corby. In making the award, Mr. MacGuinness said that keeping the company's property in good conditoin has a far reaching effect on the morale of those working on the premises. The party then went to The Governor Clinton Hotel for lunch.

Those who participated were: H. M. Beugler, vice-president; R. B. MacGuinness, general operating manager; G. A. Voorhees, Robert O. Jasperson, all of Poughkeepsie; W. J. Hannan, Newburgh; J. E. Doolittle, Beacon; E. T. Gray, Poughkeepsie; H. H. Reger, Catskill; R. L. Marchant, county manager, Kingston; A. W. Stall, Kingston, and John Fuchs, Poughkeepsie.

Grand Canyon Yields Pre-Dinosaur Fossils

New finds of footprints of reptiles left in soft mud at least 25,000,000 years ago have been made in sandstone 1,500 feet down from the rim of the Grand canyon. This is the greatest depth in the canyon at which such prints have been found.

The level at which the fossil plants and reptiles have been found belongs to the latter part of the carboniferous period, or the time when the great coal beds of the world were being formed, and was a few million years before the famous reign of the dinosaurs.

One specimen shows a row of tracks very much like mouse tracks impressed in a small slab of red stone, and in among the tiny footprints is a wavy line which represents the track of the animal's tail. Other exhibits show prints larger than a man's hand, indicating that some of the reptilian creatures of this age may have become as large as crocodiles. No bones of these creatures have been found in the Grand canyon, though some bones of reptiles making similar tracks have been found elsewhere.—New York World.

French "Independence Day"

The name "Day of the Bastille" is given in French history to the 14th of July, 1789, because on that day the mob, assisted by the Garden Francaises, rose in insurrection and destroyed the prison fortress of the Bastille. During the years 1789-1792, the anniversary of this event was called "La Fete de la Federation." The Day of the Bastille is also known as the "Day of July," and is celebrated by the French as a patriotic holiday, much as the Americans celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence on the Fourth of July.

SOUTHPAWS ENJOY LENGTHY CAREERS

Pitch Many Games After Being Tagged as Through.

Remarks by club owners and managers in the American association that any left-handed pitcher can be a winner in Tom Hickey's league if he is smart and has control, leads one to ponder over the fact that southpaws last a mighty long time in the diamond pastime.

Baseball history is dotted with instances where left-handed pitchers were figured to be all through in the majors and Class AA leagues only to make startling comebacks. The pioneers of the league this year are Rube Benton of Minneapolis and Nick Cullop and Ernie Koob of Louisville. Benton is thirty-eight years old, while Cullop is close to that mark. Koob is about thirty-four.

The great and only Rube Waddell was well up in his thirties when he helped pitch Minneapolis to three championships in 1910, 1911 and 1912. Waddell was one of the greatest of all left-handers. When one considers how long Waddell retained his effectiveness despite the fact that he never took care of himself, one must marvel at his feats on the mound.

Chances are that if Waddell had possessed the morals of Christy Mathewson or Walter Johnson he would have established records for winning games, strikeouts and low-hit games that would have stood for all time. In some of the games Waddell pitched for the Millers he showed some speed the like of which few ever saw before or since. Whenever old-timers tell you about the great pitching feats of Rube Waddell don't give them the wise-guy look and turn away, for Waddell was everything that has been said about him.

Nick Altrock, Lefty George, Howard Merritt, Cy Young (not Denton, but the younger pitcher of that name) and Bill Burns are several other southpaws who were effective at an age when most pitchers are through.

Many left-handers go to excesses and do tricks that would kill a right-hander, but these things only seem to make these southpaws heave a more baffling brand of speed and curves than ever. They seem to regard the thirty-year mark as a sort of tonic and go better after that age than ever before.

Remember Dusty Mails? He was a great pitcher for Brooklyn years ago, but he began cutting up such capers that he was shunted to the minors in 1919. Mails then got down to business and pitched such sensational ball that he was purchased by the Cleveland American league late in the season of 1920 and helped pitch the Indians to the pennant and the world's championship that season. Eventually, his peculiar way got him into trouble again and he was shipped back to the Pacific Coast league, but you will note that a guy named Dusty Mails was pitching for the St. Louis Cardinals as recently as 1925.

BASEBALL NOTES

Cobb of Detroit is giving up his place a great deal to Manush.

Eppa Rixey, Cincinnati pitcher, is an active member of the Cincinnati Indoor Tennis club.

Johnny Rawlings, veteran second baseman, is back in the game for the Pirates after a long layoff.

Utility Outfielder Johnny Tobin was released unconditionally by the Washington American baseball club.

Wiltse, recruit pitcher from Mobile, is doing some very fine box work for the Boston Red Sox in last place.

Chet Nichols, pitcher for the New Haven Eastern league team, has been sold to the Pittsburgh National league club.

* * *

Twelve hundred dollars a year was the top-notch salary for ball players in the early days of the National league.

* * *

"Cy" Young was in the major leagues for 22 years. Mathewson served 17. This is Walter Johnson's twentieth.

* * *

Jimmy Johnston, former star infielder with the Brooklyn Robins, was sold to the New York Giants by the Boston Braves.

Babe Ressler, Cincinnati's all round player, is having a great season. The Babe has been connecting at the plate in regular fashion.

Baseball in the colleges may be waning, as some think, but it remains a big attraction at Princeton university, second only to football.

* * *

The Columbus team is so far down in the American association race that when they lose a game it doesn't take anything off the percentage.

* * *

It is interesting that the new Harvard and Yale baseball captains are both third basemen, and that last year they were both left fielders.

Steel Long in Use

Steel has been known from very early times, but where and how it was first manufactured is not definitely recorded. Damascus steel used in making sword blades was known to Oriental countries from a remote period.

Cleveland was the first city to work out a plan to foster athletics and today is the largest amateur baseball center in the country.

Walter Johnson and Grover Alexander are the only two pitchers in the game today who have struck out 2,000 or more batsmen.

* * *

M. Gregg Hibbs, Jr., '25 of Bristol, Pa., has been elected captain of the Rutgers varsity baseball team. Hibbs is the first-string catcher.

Mike Gazella, Yankee infielder, holds a degree as chemist which he earned at Lafayette college, but he expects to enter law school next fall.

Years ago, President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club provided contribution boxes at the Sunday ball games, paid admissions being illegal.

* * *

Only 12 players in the history of major league baseball have served 20 or more years. Adrian "Cap" Anson topped them all with 26 active seasons.

* * *

Old John Scitt is still hurling a pretty fair brand of ball for the Giants. Fact is, he's been one of McGraw's most consistent winners this season.

Ebbets field, Brooklyn, may be the home ground of the professional soccer club that will compete in next season's tourneys and national cup ties.

* * *

In a season marked thus far by unusually few outbreaks, Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is the first National league leader to be disciplined.

Not a single contest was called off on account of rain last year or so far this season by the Charlotte (N. C.) club. Over 100 consecutive games have been played without a break.

* * *

Al Simons of the Philadelphia Athletics uses the longest bat of any major league player—37½ inches. Tris Speaker and Harry Heilmann use bats measuring 36 inches in length.

* * *

Nowadays many baseball players make the jump from the college diamond into the big league park—something unheard of a few years back, when an apprenticeship in the minors was the usual rule.

* * *

Things looked bad for Cleveland when Speaker lined to Shanks for a triple play in the game at Cleveland on June 14, 1924. But in the eleventh McNulty worked his way to third and then, with two out, he stole home on Murray, winning the game.

* * *

Seven assists at first base constitutes a world record. Kitty Bransfield, covering the initial sack for the Pirates, accepted 14 chances at Chicago May 3, 1906, and half of them were assists. Johnny Evers had a big day at short for Chicago, yet his assists were only three more than Kitty's.

* * *

Manager Frank Navin of the Detroit club was the first to use the shift when a left-handed hurler was doing duty. In a game played May 29, 1921, Worcester vs. Detroit, Sammy Bohne fed Ed Hanlon when he heard that Richmond was going to pitch. It didn't make much difference, for Detroit made but four hits and received a shutout.

Dykes Sets Record for Freak Batting in Game

Records for freak batting stunts were put in the discard last season by Jimmy Dykes of the Philadelphia Athletics in his phenomenal hitting against the Yankees on October 2.

Jimmy went to bat five times and each time up he safely hit the first ball pitched. Four of the hits were off Garland Braxton and one was off Herb Pennock, and they included a home run and a three-bagger.

Five out of five isn't so rare, but when one batter gets five clean hits out of five pitched balls he has done something which the old-timers concede is mighty unusual.

The same player had another perfect day at the plate on July 12, when he collected four hits out of that many times at bat. Two months later he made good on five out of six trips to the plate in the second game of a double-header.

Ira Flagstead, Red Sox infielder, also had an odd record. On May 8, at Detroit, Flagstead went to the plate six times, made one hit, walked five times and scored five times.

Catcher Couldn't Give Name of a New Pitcher

Paul Shannon tells one on Connie Mack which happened several years ago when the Athletics' leader was trying out seven dozen players a year in an effort to build up his team.

"The Red Sox were playing the Macks and trouncing them," says Shannon. "Connie had sent in about a half dozen pitchers and every one of them had been hammered. Finally he sent in another.

"Half dizzy with the number of changes that had been made, the umpire asked the Athletic catcher for the name of the new pitcher, so it could be announced.

"The catcher looked at the ump with a blank stare and time had to be called while he ran out to the mound to get the name of the heaver first-handed."

Grid Practice Is Taboo Until School Is Opened

Assemblage of grid men for preliminary football work under the direction of the captain prior to the opening of the school term, September 15, is taboo in the Missouri Valley conference. This decision was made after a heated discussion by the athletic directors in their meeting at Lincoln. Previous rulings did not permit a coach to take charge of his men until after that date, but the new rule will not allow the football men to begin practice even in an unorganized way until the regular school term opens.

In Memoriam.

In sad and loving memory of my darling daughter, Mary Frances Lyth who departed this life one year ago.

When the evening shades are falling,
And we are sitting all alone,
In our hearts there comes a longing,
If our darling girl could come home.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We did not think your death so near.
We saw you suffer, we heard you cry,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes,
We saw you sinking hour by hour,
We could not stop death's awful power.
But now you calmly sleep and rest,
All pains, all aches, all suffering past.
Though often you we have to part,
Your memory still dwells within our hearts
Never to be forgotten.

Griffith Assails Miller Huggins

For Discussing Peckinpaugh Deal With Public—Says He Violated Unwritten Law of Baseball.

Washington, July 31.—Clark Griffith, president of the Washington ball club, today accused Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, of violating a gentleman's agreement and upsetting a baseball precedent by announcing in St Louis that New York had held up waivers on Roger Peckinpaugh, the Senators' veteran shortstop.

Trade deals are never discussed with the press or the public until they are consummated, said Griffith. By doing so, Huggins violated the unwritten law covering professional baseball business relationships, he added.

Griff denied reports that Goose Goslin, who was suspended recently for loose playing, was on the market.

Coolidge Pays Cummins Tribute

President Sends Message of Condolence to Senator's Sister—Call His Death a Great Loss to Country.

White Pines Camp, N. Y., July 31. —President Coolidge today sent the following message of condolence to Miss Margaret Cummins, of Des Moines, over the death of her brother Senator Albert S. Cummins, of Iowa:

"It is with a sense of personal bereavement that I offer you my sympathy in the death of Senator Cummins. It is a great loss not only to the people of the state and section which he so ably represented, but to the country at large. His broad vision and keen mind were devoted not alone to the problems particularly vital to his constituents, but to the solution of the questions which affect the country as a whole. While his name is particularly associated with the tariff and transportation policies embodied in the laws now in force, he gave the benefit of his long experience and thorough training in every branch of legislation. Courageous, able and industrious, and devoted to what he believed to be right, he was an example of the best type of public servant. We shall not soon see his like in the service of the highest ideals of American life."

Four Men Held In $65,000 Robbery

Boston, July 31.—Four men were being held by Federal authorities at Bangor, Me., today for questioning in connection with the $65,000 Salisbury mail train robbery.

Federal Agent William F. Morin at Bangor notified Captain Thomas E. Bligh of the Massachusetts state police of the capture this afternoon.

The four men, accompanied by a woman, were first seen in Bangor on July 27th. Two of them disappeared but returned on July 29th. They answer, Morin said, descriptions of the Salisbury bandits and have refused to account for their movements.

The men were taken to Belfast court and held until Monday for questioning. Meanwhile, their photographs and fingerprints were sent to Boston.

Old Turkish Capital Presents Two Views

Approaching Constantinople one may get the impression that it either is the world's most beautiful city or that it is the most squalid city on earth, depending upon whether it is approached from the sea or the land. From the land the city's 680 mosques and minarets, its 500 palaces and gardens, rising in the form of an amphitheater above the Golden Horn, give it the appearance of the type of oriental city described in the Arabian Nights, says E. Alexander Powell in the American Magazine.

Alexander von Humboldt, noted traveler and student of nature, declared Constantinople was one of the three most beautiful cities in the world, Naples and Salzburg being the other two. Lord Byron also extolled Constantinople's position as being incomparable to any he had ever seen.

The historical interest that abounds in Constantinople even surpasses, for many, that of its beauty. The city's history extends back nearly 3,000 years. Since the corn-laden galleys from the Black sea glided through the Hellespont in the days of Darius and Alexander, and the Phoenicians moved in from the Marmora sea, down to the present time, when gigantic battleships swing at their moorings off Seraglio point, Constantinople has been an object of desire for ambitious military leaders and land-seeking nations.

Unwise to Disregard Danger in Lightning

There are cases of persons having garments torn by lightning while they themselves have suffered no serious harm. The body is largely composed of water, and if the clothing is dry the bolt will pass through the body. If the clothing is saturated the bolt may follow the clothing instead of the body. It is advised by some that anyone caught in a thunderstorm in the wilds should immerse himself in order to saturate his garments, or, if this be impossible, to expose himself fully to the rain in order to be drenched at once.

There are few manifestations of nature's power more awe inspiring and at the same time more fascinating than a violent thunderstorm. Comparatively few adults acknowledge a feeling of terror in the presence of this majestic display. There is, however, a distinct difference between fear and caution. The danger from lightning is never great, but it exists and it should be reduced as nearly as possible to the vanishing point.

First Animal Protection

The first step in the enactment of humane legislation was taken in 1822, when a bill providing punishment for the ill treatment of cattle was introduced into the British parliament by Richard Martin, an Irish nobleman, later nicknamed by King George IV "Humanity Martin." To Richard Martin belongs the credit for the first conviction under the law for the protection of animals. The misused animal was dragged into court to show evidence of its master's cruelty, and the driver was found guilty. Two years later, Martin formed a society for the enforcement of his anti-cruelty act. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was thereupon organized. From this society originated the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, founded in New York in 1866 by Henry Bergh.

Wily Whales

Sir John Bland-Sutton, famous English surgeon, tells a striking story to demonstrate the cunning with which the "killer" whale chases its prey.

It feeds on seals, which it cannot easily drag off the ice, but it swims under the ice on which the seal lies, and using its powerful dorsal fin, suddenly rises, and breaks off a piece of the ice with it. If the seal tries to escape by sliding over the ice, the whale follows it, and continues its breaking tactics until the seal is captured.

The teeth of killer whales make those of the crocodile seem puny, but, curiously enough, these terrors of the sea, who even prey on their harmless relatives, hunt in packs, like wolves.

Child's Cost to Parents

One of the life insurance companies estimates that a child costs $[illegible]. This includes birth and expense until he is eighteen years old. This total is reached by adding to the initial "cost of being born," estimated at $250, the sums of $2,800 for food, $1,[illegible] for rent, reckoning the share of the child as one-sixth of the total so expended; $[illegible] for fuel and light, $[illegible] for furniture and household maintenance, $144 for the cost of installation of the home, and for clothing $[illegible] for a boy and $[illegible] for a girl.

RADIO

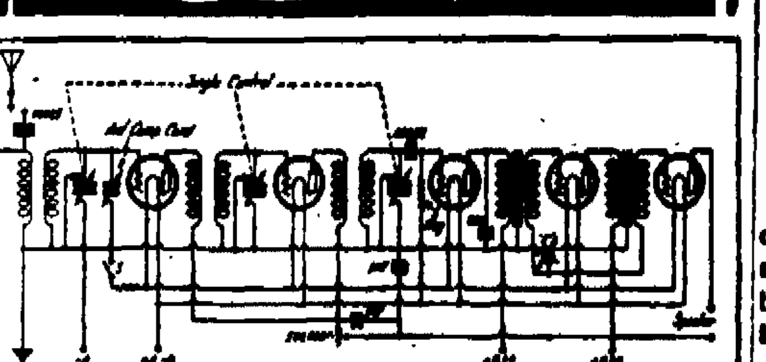

Diagram of Five-Tube, One-Control Radio-Frequency Set, Which Employs Two Stages of R. F. With Positive Control of Oscillations.

By JAMES E. CARTER
In the New York Herald-Tribune.

The radio-buying public has reached certain definite conclusions about what makes up a good radio receiver. These conclusions, in practical form, are embodied in most really successful manufactured sets of today. Some receivers have greater perfection than others. Some are of better design and construction. A few are outstanding in achievement.

A good set, first of all, whether it be home-made or factory-built, must be of correct design. The home constructor who is contemplating the building of a receiving set is naturally desirous of obtaining the utmost in the way of performance and is keenly alert to improvements in the successful manufactured set.

The first point of importance to the home set builder will be the type of circuit to use. It is needless to say that the day of the regenerative tickler feed-back type of receiver without radio-frequency amplification before the detector is over.

There remains the straight radio-frequency circuit, with positive controlled oscillation, which is probably the easiest all-around highly efficient circuit to construct.

Volume and Distance.

For the set builder who is situated fifty or more miles from a broadcast station two stages of tuned radio-frequency amplification, followed by a detector and two or three stages of audio amplification, will give ample satisfaction in the way of volume and distance. Where the user is located within 50 miles of a strong broadcasting station three stages of tuned radio-frequency amplification is necessary to work distant stations as near as 20 kilocycles either above or below the near-by station.

In the accompanying diagram the five-tube radio receiver to be described in this article is shown. This set employs two stages of transformer coupled tuned radio-frequency amplification, a non-regenerative detector and two stages of transformer coupled audio-frequency amplification. An examination of this diagram will show that there is nothing unusual in the wiring of the circuit, the chief point of interest being the way in which one-control tuning is accomplished. A triple condenser is used to tune the secondary coils of the three radio-frequency transformers, all of which are identical in construction, and a small adjustable fixed compensating capacity is connected in shunt with each of the three units of the condenser to compensate for the variation in the capacity of the wiring of each of the circuits. Also a variable antenna compensating condenser is connected in shunt with the unit of the condenser tuning the secondary of the antenna coupler. This has been found necessary to make possible efficient operation with any type of antenna. Another feature which makes the set more flexible is the small fixed condenser, which may be placed in series with the antenna. When this condenser is in use the receiver is more selective and may be operated from a large antenna without experiencing interference.

The Parts Needed.

The following is a list of apparatus actually employed in the construction of this receiver:

One three-gang Perlex condenser (each section .00025 mfd.).
Three radio-frequency transformers matched for use with the condenser (Perlex or home-made).
Two Thorardson audio-frequency transformers.
One Hammarlund compensating condenser (50 mmfd.).
One 500,000-ohm Centralab variable resistance.
One Centralab modulator (optional).
Five Benjamin sockets.
Two Dubilier .00025 mfd. fixed condensers.
One Dubilier .001 mfd. fixed condenser.
Two Dubilier 1 mfd. fixed condensers.
One 5 meg. Durham grid leak.
One 6-ohm rheostat.
One Carter battery switch.
Eleven Eby binding posts.
One panel 21½x9x3-16 inches.
One panel 10½x4½x3-16 inches.
Two panels 3x2½x3-16 inches.
One baseboard 23x10x¾ inches.

The method employed to control the volume of this receiver eliminates the necessity of connecting jacks in the output of each stage of amplification. A 500,000-ohm variable resistance is connected in series with the plate supply of the two radio-frequency amplifier tubes, and by adjusting this resistance the sensitivity of the receiver may be increased or decreased as desired. By using this method to control volume any desired amount of sound may be obtained without introducing distortion. Also this method is superior to detuning the set, as it does not reduce the degree of selectivity. In addition to this volume control, the set is equipped with a "modulator"—a device to control the output of an audio amplifier. This instrument is not shown in the diagram, as it is not considered necessary when the sensitivity control is employed. For those who wish to use a modulator, however, it may be explained that it consists of a high resistance potentiometer connected across the secondary of the first audio-frequency transformer, with the slider connected to the grid of the tube.

The Triple Condenser.

As may be seen, the whole set is built around the triple condenser, which is of the straight-line frequency die cast type. This entire unit is assembled in an aluminum frame 18 inches long and 9 inches deep, which serves as a panel and coil mounting. Studs projecting from the rear of the casting serve to hold the coils in their proper position and the two small 2 by 3-inch panels, supporting the sockets for the radio-frequency tubes, are fastened to the base of the casting with machine screws.

The amplifying apparatus is mounted on the 10½ by 4½-inch panel mentioned in the list of parts. The location of the panel and the arrangement of the apparatus is clearly shown in the drawing. After the apparatus has been mounted and wired on this panel the panel should be fastened to the baseboard with mounting brackets.

The tuned radio-frequency transformers used in this set should all be purchased with the condensers or home-made. If home-made the secondary winding should have 55 turns of No. 26 double cotton-covered wire wound on a three-inch diameter tube. The primary winding consists of nine turns of the same size wire on a 2¾-inch diameter tube.

The angle to which the coils are mounted in the set should also be noted, as this is the customary position to minimize electromagnetic coupling and is approximately 57 degrees.

When wiring radio-frequency circuits careful attention should be given to the location of the tubes in order to keep the grid and plate wires as short as possible.

The Next Job.

After the receiver has been assembled and wired as described in this article the next job is to balance the three tuned circuits and the antenna circuit to the same inductance. This is necessary to make it possible for the triple condenser to tune the three circuits to the same wave length simultaneously. To balance the receiver the antenna, ground, batteries and loud speaker must be connected to the set and a powerful local station tuned in. If it is found impossible to tune in a station with the loud speaker, head phones should be connected in its place and the dial adjusted until something is heard.

After the local station has been tuned to maximum volume with the master control of the triple condenser, the antenna compensating condenser should be tuned to gain a further increase in signal strength. The next problem is to determine whether the radio-frequency circuits require adjustment. The master control should be turned back and forth through a few degrees on the dial, and if it is found that there are two points on the dial where the signals are louder it is indicative of the fact that the radio-frequency transformers are not tuned to exactly the same wave length. If this is found to be the case the dial should be tuned to one of the points of maximum volume and the small compensating condensers on the rear of the condenser adjusted until maximum volume is obtained. After this has been done the test just described should be repeated to make sure that only one peak remains.

Enameled Wire Is Best for Outdoor Antenna

Enameled copper wire is best suited for outdoor antenna. Wire coated in this manner will not become corroded, as is the case when bare copper wire is exposed to the elements. The advantage in preventing corrosion is that the resistance of the antenna circuit is kept at a minimum. This always is desirable.

Drilling Panel

If you have drilled the holes for a condenser or another panel-mounting instrument and find the screws won't meet the threads in the condenser, drill an oversize shaft hole so the condenser can be fitted to the drilled holes.

Lead-in Wire

Lead-in wire should be taken off the aerial at the end pointing toward the section of the country from which you expect to receive most stations.

Twice Escaped Death Plans Carefully Laid

Sorcerers in Papua, or New Guinea, seldom attempt to employ their "puri-puri," as native magic is termed, against white men, but twice one Mira-Oa did seek to avenge a fancied wrong by bringing about the death of Merlin Moore Taylor, the writer relates in "The Heart of Black Papua."

The first attempt was frustrated when a native discovered that a coconut handed the white man contained minute slivers of bamboo in the nut's milk. If swallowed, these bits of fiber would penetrate the delicate tissues of the vital organs, causing inflammation and eventually death.

Later Taylor narrowly escaped death from a snake which charged toward him while he was walking along a narrow path. The sorcerer had captured the poisonous reptile, tied a noose of pliant vine back of its head, and placed it in a pot over a fire with a handkerchief owned by Taylor. Tortured by the heat, the snake associated the scent of the handkerchief with its torture, and when released sought to attack the person whose scent was similar to that of the handkerchief.

The witch doctor then became resigned and disappeared into the jungle until the white man had departed.

On the Trolley Car

On board the trolley car which plies between the Sixty-ninth street terminal and Easton a man and wife were in earnest conversation. The man had been speaking in subdued tones when his wife burst out with: "She wasn't. She wasn't to blame. If there's any blame to be fixed it belongs to the husband. I think she was entirely justified. Any woman in her place would have done the same. I don't care if the meals were late. She loved him and that made it all right." No, gentle reader, this isn't the sort of marital difficulty you suspect. The husband of the woman who spoke the foregoing, exclaimed. "But any woman that wastes all afternoon on a Pekingese is a good-for-nothing bum, and any man who stands for such nonsense, deserves to get indigestion."—Philadelphia Record.

Cause of "Cold" Mystery

In spite of all attempts to determine the specific cause of the common cold, the cause remains unknown. A cold, as the doctors explain it, is a catarrhal inflammation of the lining of the nose, mouth and throat. It is held by some to be due to infection with some peculiar germ which as yet has not been found. Some think that this micro-organism is so small that it cannot be detected even by the most delicate instrument. At various times various bacteria have been thought to be the cause of colds, but no definite organism has yet been chosen to bear the blame. Medical authorities generally are not quite agreed as to the bacterial origin of the disease. Evidence is still being collected and weighed.—Kansas City Times.

By Inches

When Bobbie was six, he was given a real watch, which, regardless of quality or accuracy, had a loud tick.

Naturally the little fellow was very proud, and he would stroll up and down the street, stopping every moment or two to draw the timepiece from his pocket and regard it gravely.

Every passer-by smiled at Bobby's performance, but the climax came when his little cousin, Betty, tripped along and asked him the time.

Bobby regarded his watch perplexedly for a moment, and then replied with dignity, "Two inches to four."

Historic Timekeeper

Four hundred years ago a church clock was made at Wantage (the birthplace of King Alfred the Great), in England, and placed in the church tower of East Hendred. It played every three hours the "Angel's Hymn," and went on ticking out the time for 400 years, thus placing all grandfather's clocks in the shade. East Hendred's timepiece had recently to be stopped for repairs. When these have been satisfactorily completed it is not anticipated that the church clock will need further expert attention until the year [illegible].

Friendship

Perfect friendship is that of good men who resemble each other in virtue; for these, as good themselves, are equal in their desire of good things for one another, and they who desire good things for their friends, love them especially for the sake of these things. For they value them for what they are and not for something accidental. The friendship, therefore, of these men endures as long as they are good, for virtue is something stable. And each of them is good in himself and also in relation to his friend, for good men are both good absolutely and useful to each other.—Aristotle.

Silks with a Firmness of Weave Win Approval and Light-Weight Woolens Are Their Most Frequent Traveling Companion.

Although for occasions there is a tendency toward such materials as give a glimpse of the slip beneath, there is, taking the scheme of dressing as a whole, rather more of a tendency toward substantial stuffs. Of course, chiffons are the exception, but then they belong to evenings, or at least high noons. They are not of a quality to appear en route, or to stand the strain contingent on the sterner duties of life.

The success of soft, light-weight woolens, as, for instance, materials of the kasha ilk, and of jerseys, has given rise to a renewal of interest in silks with something of a body—taffeta, moire, and so on. Designers no doubt argue that one may get better results in tailoring silks which have something of a firmness of weave, and while there are many times when one prefers a light, frivolous frock, the rank and file of women have adopted, consciously or unconsciously, more of a tailored mien.

The simple jumper type of costume has made such a wide appeal that it really may be said to have revolutionized things. One sees no prospect of laying aside this convenient and jaunty costume for the one-piece gown. The jumper or overblouse now has a belt, and it sometimes has a bosom, after the manner of the Tuxedo shirt.

Moire is liked for these tunics, as well as for entire dresses, and one of the best points is the adaptability with which it has come from the ball-room into the open.

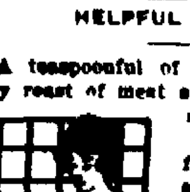
HELPFUL HINTS

A teaspoonful of sugar added to any roast of meat adds to its flavor and appearance.



A tablespoonful of vinegar added to the boiling water in which fish is cooked improves the flavor and makes the fish more flaky and better liked.

If a custard is curdled, pour it into a cold bowl and beat well with an egg beater; if this does not make it smooth, strain and use it as a thin custard sauce.

Boiling the molasses to be used in cookies or cake makes them taste richer and cut more smooth.

Serve mashed potato piled lightly into the hot potato dish. If smoothed and patted down it makes it soppy.

To decorate cakes for children, frost them, then dip a small brush into melted chocolate or beaten egg yolk and put on design or name as desired. Any color may be used by adding fruit coloring to confectioner's sugar mixed with a bit of milk or water.

When washing spinach or any greens add a little salt to the first water; it will dislodge any insects that may be on the leaves.

When creaming butter for a cake add a tablespoonful or two of hot milk or water to the butter; it will hasten the creaming. The moisture used may be omitted from the liquid which the recipe requires.

Use slightly dry sliced bread for French toast. Beat an egg, add half a cupful of milk, covering both sides and fry in a hot fat in a frying pan. If the bread is cut into narrow strips it is more attractive to serve.

For a caramel custard brown two tablespoonfuls of sugar in a smooth frying pan, add two cupfuls of scalding hot milk and stir until all the caramel is dissolved, then add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar; pour into custard cups and bake or steam until firm. A bit of salt always improves any custard.

The field mushroom makes delicious eating. Fry in butter, serve with cream over buttered toast.

Embargo Acts

The first embargo act of the United States was passed 122 years ago, in retaliation against British interference with American commerce.

The first embargo lasted 60 days, with little effect. In 1807 another embargo act was passed directed against both England and France, which were then at war. American commerce, however, suffered more from this act than did the countries against which it was aimed.

Both American and Canadian Officials Try to Stop Bootleg Traffic Which Resulted in Forty-four Deaths.

Buffalo, N Y., July 31.—The American and Canadian governments began an attack today against the Niagara border bootleg traffic with its toll of two score deaths from wood alcohol beverages in Buffalo, Toronto and other cities in the border region.

Chief Frank J Hale with a squad of federal agents working under direct orders from Washington raided a wildcat brewery here alleged to have boosted the alcoholic content of the beer by "needle treatment". The squad wrecked $10 000 worth of machinery, and seized alcohol from a gun machine which propelled it into the beer vats The seized alcohol was being tested today to see if it was part of the poisoned cargo responsible for the 44 deaths in western New York and Canada

Meanwhile, Dry Chief Henry Bradford directed forces against "high-powered" saloons staging eight raids and serving summonses on dozens of proprietors and bartenders

Question—When a frame building burns down, what is left? Answer—The chimney alone, because it is built of brick. Chimneys are built of brick because they are fireproof. Why not construct the whole building of brick, that is Real Fire Prevention. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure When you build, use brick exclusively. There may be a slight increase in first cost, but always a large saving in maintenance Building brick and sand. TERRY BROTHERS CO. Tel. 1674.

GREAT SOLDIER MET DEATH LIKE CAESAR

Wallenstein One of Greatest Military Leaders

The man who probably came nearer to making himself a Napoleon than any other in Europe, from the assassination of Caesar to the appearance of the Corsican was Wallenstein, whose tremendous influence made him an outstanding figure in history.

Just three centuries ago, in 1626, Wallenstein raised an army for the Holy Roman empire to oppose the Bohemians, after the latter had been augmented by the Danes and other northern Protestants He smashed the forces opposed to him and drove them through Hungary Then he drove north, clearing great sections of Germany, but was repulsed in an attempt to capture Stralsund on the Baltic He had, however, been so thoroughly victorious that his foes seemed conquered But as so often happens, the triumph had been too complete. Wallenstein had been arrogant in his treatment of the princes for whom he was fighting and they suspected he planned to overthrow them and make himself a dictator over central and eastern Europe They brought about his dismissal by Emperor Ferdinand

Gustavus Adolphus who had made Sweden the master power of the North, then entered the arena and France was backing him with subsidies The victors were suddenly put on the defensive by the march of the Swedes through Germany, while their allies, the Saxons, occupied Bohemia The princes who had brought about Wallenstein's fall had to implore him to rescue them At first he declined then consented when offered not only command over all the imperial armies, but power over conquered territory greater than had ever been bestowed by a monarch

Wallenstein quickly pushed the Saxons out of Bohemia and overran Saxony. Gustavus Adolphus had to march north to meet him and at Lutzen, in 1632, the great armies met The Swedes won the day, but the defeat did not lessen Wallenstein's dreams Plots and counter-plots thickened, until eight or nine of his officers were bought and agreed to assassinate their leader On a February night in 1634, at a banquet in one of Wallenstein's castles, three of his followers were slain. The conspirators hurried to Wallenstein's quarters and found him in bed With his customary courage, he threw his arms outward, inviting the sword thrusts The blade of an assassin went through his breast.—Boston Post.

Posthumous Letters to Son

When J S Stevenson, of Vineland, N. J, died recently he left in the custody of an unknown person a collection of letters to be mailed one each year to his son who will receive it on his birthday. The little boy is now five years old and it is planned that he will receive these letters written by his father until the year he marries. Each letter contains advice suitable to the age of the boy the year he receives it. In the first letter the boy is told that his father has gone to see "Sissie Ann," a baby sister who died some time ago. "Some day," the father wrote, "you will come to see both of us." "Daddy is proud of his Dickie boy," the letter continued, "and knows that he will be good to his mother and take care of her always."—Exchange.

Woodpecker Made Trouble

The cause of early morning rappings and the jingling of the telephone bell in the home of Mrs. Joseph Heaslip at Hagerstown, Md., had been looked for in vain by police and telephone officials. So at three o'clock in the morning, Mrs. Heaslip arose and sat down by a window in the rooms where the sounds had been registering. Shortly after four o'clock a red-headed woodpecker began operating on a telephone pole. The phone instantly rang and the rappings of the woodpecker came through the room amazingly audible

NAMES AND DOINGS INSCRIBED ON ROCK

Proud Conquistadores Left Record of Deeds.

Abruptly ending a low mountain range and jutting out into a windswept valley like a bold promontory in a gray-green sea El Morro rock guards a vast, silent region in western New Mexico. Although it is the most precious cliff historically in the United States and as a national monument is valued by the government, few people who make overland trips ever turn aside from the main highway in order to view its grandeur or to ponder upon its significance. The rock's perpendicular walls, like huge escarpments, tower 215 feet sheer from the valley's floor and extend wedgelike for hundreds of feet back until they merge into the mountain chain Their smooth, hard surface, pinkish-yellow in color, is ideal for inscriptions. Charles F. Lummis calls the rock the "stone autograph album." Upon it, more than 300 years ago, the invading Spanish conquistadores carved their names and the dates of their visits. They called it El Morro, which means the castle, but the name by which it is known now is Inscription rock. With their sword points the Spaniards carved their names, not in fun, but as a record of their advent Inscription rock is situated 35 miles east of the Indian pueblo of Zuni, about 50 miles southwest of Grants, N. M, which is on the transcontinental highway, and is near the Mormon settlement of Ramah The trail to it leads over the vast lava flow which lies like a huge snake through that region, making difficult driving for automobiles. The rock is on the historic trail which extended from Zuni to the pueblos of the Rio Grande and the route which the conquistadores followed in their quest for the seven cities of Cibola, the fabled story of which led to the discovery of New Mexico by the Spaniards in 1539. A few hundred feet back of the wedge-shaped front of the rock a prehistoric trail, with its separate footholds worn deep in the stone, leads to the top, where the remains of two pueblos may be seen.

The autographs, inscribed in quaint Spanish difficult to decipher, are found near the base of the rock. They cover many decades in time, from the invasion by Coronado's men, the leader himself passing to the south of its location, down to the advent on September 17, 1849, of J. H. Simpson and R. H Kern, an artist, who were probably the first Americans to visit the rock One of the most important of the names is that of Juan de Onate, the founder of New Mexico. On a return trip from San Gabriel, N. M, to the Gulf of California he stopped at the rock and wrote these words in Spanish: "Passed by here to Commander Don Juan de Onate from the discovery of the sea of the south on the 16th of April, 1605." This was two years before the English settled on the east coast. Onate's army consisted of two missionaries and thirty soldiers.

Just Like a Man

Frank L. Dame, president of the North American company, described what he considered the first case on record of a customer's paying a gas bill and immediately asking for a second one. The case was reported by the management of a North American subsidiary, says a news story in the New York Times.

"The bill I have just paid is rather large, and I would like a smaller one to take home to my wife," explained the customer. "The reason the bill I paid is so large is because while my wife was away last week I cooked a breakfast for myself. Then I went away for a business trip that lasted four days and when I returned I found the gas still burning. Now I must have a small bill to show her."

Seal of Solomon

Solomon's seal is a design consisting of two interlaced triangles, which form a star of six points. One triangle is generally dark, while the other is light, to represent symbolically the union of soul and body.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 31—After an early advance in the railroad stocks today, the professionals in the stock market again concentrated their activity on the motor shares. The speculative battle was renewed in Hudson Motors, Chrysler, General Motors, Studebaker, Willys-Overland and other stocks which led the violent upturn in the market just prior to the smash in February and March.

The shorts in Hudson Motors received further punishment at the hands of the bulls when the price was advanced aggressively to 71¼ in the first period, representing a gain of about 10 points from yesterday's low. Chrysler and Studebaker were more orderly in their new advances, which added about 1½ points to their market values as compared with Friday's close. The market was overwhelmingly professional, with increasing evidence of the reckless bidding up of stock prices which precipitated the break earlier in the year.

The opening prices of New York Central and other of the well-known dividend railroad stocks showed advances of a point or more over Friday's final level, but there was no apparent effort to follow up the improvement in this section of the market.

The public utilities reached a slightly higher price level under the lead of the Greater New York gas and electric stocks. Brooklyn Union Gas advanced to 92¾ for a new high on the move, and Brooklyn Edison sold up about 3 points on rumors that both companies would eventually be included in the gigantic combination of utility enterprises headed by Consolidated Gas. North America, Columbia Gas, Standard Gas, Philadelphia Company and public service corporations' stocks were actively sought at higher prices. Oils continued to slump, United States Steel and the independents were freely offered on profit-taking. Coppers, equipments, sugars and specialties were quiet and featureless.

Railroad stocks and public utility issues were the leaders in a brisk upward movement in the final period The investment rails were active and strong under the lead of New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Railway, while the Greater New York gas and electric companies' stocks were the outstanding ground gainers of the utility group. Youngstown Sheet and Tube continued its spectacular advance to 90 for an new gain of 4 points and Cast Iron Pipe was again in demand. Hudson Motors was the strong spot of the motor group, with a 4-point advance to 72¾.

Mercury Destroys Fungus

Mercury, which in one form or another is a specific for various human ills, is the last word in fungicides for nursery stock. Treatment with organic compounds of mercury during the operation of grafting apple nursery stock has been found by Department of Agriculture experts to reduce materially subsequent infection of the stock with crown gall. Formaldehyde has been used in the past for this purpose, but the more recently developed mercury compounds have proved much more efficacious in checking the spread of the fungus growth.

Treat Diseases of Aged

That the ills of the old need as much attention as those of the very young is the contention of the Czech medical faculty at Prague, where a clinic that treats exclusively the diseases of old age has recently been opened, according to advices received by the American Medical association. Prof. B. Tisslt of the medical faculty of the University of Prague, who is in charge of the clinic, stated in his introductory lecture that two groups of diseases would be studied, those that are peculiar to the old and those that present a different aspect when they occur during old age. This clinic is of particular interest to the republic of Czechoslovakia on account of the system of old-age and invalidity insurance in effect July 1.

Species of Snakes

The black snake, black racer, and the green and blue racer are the same. Snakes of this species found in the West and Southwest represent a distinct color variety, hence the name blue racer is applied to the black snake in some parts of the country.
